2018 WEST REGIONAL CONFERENCE

ESC
UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

University of Arizona Engineering Student Council

The National Association of Engineering Student Councils, Inc. is a unique student-run organization that spans the United States. Engineering Student Councils govern College of Engineering across America, and through NAESC, they can share best practices, network on a national scale, and develop their council. The organization hosts conferences in the fall for each of its 5 geographic regions, and one national conference, called the Engineering Leadership Summit, in the spring. ELS is the most elite gathering of engineering student leaders in the nation, and acts as the epicenter for collaboration among Engineering Student Councils. To expand our membership's horizons and contacts beyond the United States, NAESC is also working to collaborate with the Canadian Federation of Engineering Students (CFES), the Board of European Students of Technology (BEST), and the German organization "bonding".

What is WRC?

Annually, NAESC plans five regional conferences and one national conference. This year, the University of Arizona's Engineering Student Council is hosting the Western Regional Conference (WRC) to bring together engineering leaders from ten universities throughout the West region. This conference is meant for them to collaborate and share ideas on how to improve their councils. They will do so through workshops, "Council Chat" discussion sessions, and leadership development.

Ambassador's Address

For those of you who do not know me, my name is Sam Greenberg, I am a Junior in Chemical Engineering at Arizona State University, and also your West Region Ambassador to NAESC for 2018-19. Welcome to those of you who are attending your first conference, and welcome back for those of you have already attended a NAESC conference. I hope you are able to take a couple things out of this conference. First I hope you develop your own leadership skills; that is the main educational component of these conferences. Second, network. You are surrounded by some of the best engineering student leaders this side of the Mississippi, and everyone here has unique skills and experiences to learn from. And most importantly, have fun! Big shout out to the University of Arizona for hosting our West Region Conference 2018! (even though it's not as nice as Arizona State) Come say hi to me if you know me, and if you have not please come meet me. As always, West Is The Best!
